

Control of Senate Is Key Question

(Editor's note: Next to the presidential race, political attention is focused on the question of which party will control the U. S. Senate in January. The Republicans now hold 51 seats to 45 for the Democrats. A net gain of four November 2 would regain for the Democrats the control they lost in 1946. Hence rivalry is intense in a number of key states.)

(Ernest B. Vaccaro, who has covered President Truman's campaign, and Jack Bell, who has traveled with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, report here on the Senate outlook.)

By JACK BELL
New York, Oct. 22 —(AP)— Although the struggle for control of the Senate is hot, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey plans to skip any visit to West Virginia, scene of one of the crucial races.

Dewey's aides tell newsmen privately the Republican Senator Chapman Revercomb's handling of the displaced persons issue is the real reason for this decision.

The official explanation being made in West Virginia, however, is that the state couldn't be fitted into the GOP presidential candidate's itinerary, that "from top to bottom" the national ticket wants Revercomb re-elected.

Ten days away from the November 2 election, Republicans generally concede they are going to need every seat they can get to keep the reins in the Senate. Their loss of command there would seriously handicap a new administration's legislative program.

At line with this, Dewey has swallowed some obvious personal differences to campaign for other GOP senatorial candidates.

Senator Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota, who bolted the Dewey-Bricker ticket in 1944, is a case in point.

But Dewey is said to view the Revercomb race in West Virginia in a different light. The background is this:

Congress last session enacted a bill to admit some 200,000 Europeans displaced by the war. Critics said the bill discriminated against Jews and some Catholics. Dewey asked Revercomb, as chairman of a judiciary subcommittee, to try to change the law. Revercomb denied the measure was discriminatory and sat tight.

Thus Dewey is said to feel that if he now gives any personal help to Revercomb — as he has been under strong pressure to do — he would be put in the position of hedging on the question of opening the immigration gates wider for the European refugees.

Last night, GOP national chairman Hugh D. Scott, Jr., said in a speech at Huntington that the entire Republican organization and the national ticket "from top to bottom" wants Revercomb re-elected.

Addressing the same rally, Revercomb said he "has been used against him and, win or lose, he will not bow to outside dictation."

Revercomb is opposed by Matthew M. Neely, Democratic former senator.

Even if Revercomb falls by the wayside along with some other GOP candidates, the Dewey strategists feel the Republicans still can retain Senate control.

They now have a 51 to 45 margin over the Democrats. That means a net gain of four seats would let the Democrats take over.

The Republicans could keep control with a 48 to 48 tie. If they elect their presidential ticket, Warren, as vice president, would be able to break the tie in their favor.

The main theme in the Dewey campaign centers on saving two Republican Senators — John S. Cooper of Kentucky and E. V. Rittenberg of Wyoming — and knocking off Democratic Senator James E. Murray of Montana. Murray is opposed by Republican Tom J. Davis.

(The Dewey strategists line it up this way: They are afraid they will lose three seats through defeats of Senators Ball in Minnesota and Revercomb in West Virginia and of Rep. Ross Ritzley, who is seeking the seat being vacated by Senator E. H. Moore in Oklahoma.)

That would make the Senate line-up a 48 to 48 tie.

But if Cooper survives, Davis beats Murray in Montana and Rittenberg pulls through against Gov. Lester C. Hunt, this Democratic opponent in Wyoming, they would wind up with a 50 to 46 margin.

Despite All Questions the Russian Fliers Want to Remain Outside Soviet Zone

By RELMAN MORIN
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst
(For Dewitt MacKenzie)

Two weeks ago today, a Russian airplane crashed-landed in an American field in Linz, Austria, and three men stepped out of it. Two were Russian officers; the third was a flight attendant.

The officers said they were deserters.

Even when confronted with the Russian commander in Austria, they persisted in saying they were deserters with the Soviet Union, and wanted to go to the United States.

That, I submit, required a very high degree of moral courage — and a powerful inner compulsion.

Put yourself in their place. Imagine yourself, still in uniform, facing up to the "big brass" and stating that you had deserted and were pleading yourself under the protection of a nation which is, in fact, ranged against your own.

Yesterday, having made good their desertion, the two Russians requested citations at a news conference, but not entirely startling, to wit:

1. They estimated that 70 per cent of the Russian people are opposed to the Communist party, but are afraid to do anything about it.

2. The Communists have failed

Four Youths End Up in Florida Jail

Miami, Fla., Oct. 22. —(UP)— Four New York youths who came here to form a robbery ring and fatten their pocketbooks were sitting it out today in city jail.

Police arrested the quartet yesterday when a raid on their apartment yielded seven guns, numerous blackjacks, knives and 200 rounds of ammunition. The raid came after one of the youths was arrested for speeding.

Authorities identified the four as Francis Hart, 20; Sherman L. Horn, 22; John Farrell, 18; and Arthur Hefner, 20. All four gave Bronx addresses.

Detective Cap. H. G. Howard said the gang confessed six hold-ups in Dade and neighboring Broward counties in the last three weeks including the robbery of a group of guests at the home of Joseph Berlinger in Hollywood, Fla.

In that job, he said, they got $400 and shot Berlinger's maid, Marie Elmer, through the car.

The raid of the gang's apartment also turned up an unmailed letter which L. Hornedieu had written to a Bronx girl friend. It told the youths' story neatly.

"This land is one big bank," the letter said. "There are four of us working together here so between us we can make a pretty good living."

"Everybody here has money and everybody has a gun, so we have to be on our toes. So far no body got shot yet."

"The law here is very slow and the biggest part of it is very stupid. The real New York gunmen come down here and run the law in circles."

"Before I leave here, I have a feeling I am going to kill my first man. So after that one the rest will come easy."

"Every gunman and his brother will be here next month. There is at least 10 robberies every night."

But if all reports are true, the proportionate cost to the two countries for building and research in aviation is at least the same.

And finally, although Russia may not yet have the atom bomb, it is certain that she is spending enormous sums of money in looking for the ways and means of manufacturing it. Probably, the Soviets are spending as much more than the United States on the project, since research often can be more costly than the actual making of an article.

Hence, when the Russian officers used the words, "at the expense of the common people," they were speaking with dreadful clarity. The average Russian—who is friendly, openhearted, and intensely human being—will never live to see the "better life" the Bolsheviks promised him, as long as his government continues to waste his substance on an army and a staggering military budget.

But, as time goes on, as the months pass and there is no attack, it will be increasingly difficult for the Soviet government to explain the tremendous expense as a necessary "defense measure."

Then will come a critical point for the men in the Kremlin. They are armed and unorganized. The Russian masses are nevertheless an elemental force, once they start moving—as the Bolsheviks well know, having once started the revolution.

The Kremlin may hesitate to let the Russian people, themselves, do a thing as dangerous as periodical for the Russian rulers and for the peaceful nations of the world.

Methodists Table Salary Proposal

Little Rock, Oct. 22. —(UP)— The Little Rock District Methodist Conference today tabled a motion for a minimum annual salary of $1,050 for each of its ministers.

A resolution suggesting a new salary scale was referred to a special committee for study and recommendation, action at next year's conference.

Bishop Paul E. Martin ordained 12 Arkansas ministers at today's session of the conference.

Ordained as deacons were Joe Hampton; Alfred Deblack, Mabel Osborne W. White, Delight; Charles V. Mashburn, Prescott; Howard L. Williams, Everett Vinson and Cagle E. Fair, all of the Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University, Dallas. New elders are Dewey McCalley, Texarkana; H. R. Holland, Stephens; Charles Baughman, Southern Methodist University; William Savage, Junction City, and Kirwin Hale, Waldo.

Dr. Kenneth Pope of the First Methodist church of Austin, Tex., delivered the ordination sermon.

An address by Bishop W. C. Martin of the Fort Worth-Dallas area was to highlight activities tonight. Bishop Martin is one of the Methodist church officials in charge of the advance for Christ and his church' movement. He was to present the four-year program of the entire Methodist church in his address.

The salary proposal was introduced by Rev. R. H. Cannon of Texarkana. It would set minimum salaries at $1,500 a year and stabilize salaries of district superintendents at $8,000 a year. It was proposed that the program be financed by cutting overhead expenses by reducing the number of districts in the conference from seven to six.

State Warehouses to Slow Down on Cotton

Little Rock, Oct. 22. —(UP)— Incoming shipments are running ahead of outgoing ones, so Arkansas warehouses are going to stop receiving cotton from the fields for a few days.

Warehousemen, cotton traders and railroad officials today were working out plans for an embargo on shipments from the fields.

Traders expressed belief, however, that the warehouses would be accepting normal shipments again early next week.

The situation was explained here by Edgar F. Wade, vice president of the federal cotton commission. He said a shortage of warehouse labor has forced the warehouses to concentrate on receiving the record crop had they have fallen behind in shipping out the staple.

Wade said one reason for the warehouse labor shortage is that laborers can make more money picking the cotton than they can working in the warehouses.

Enemy Submarines Biggest Threat in Next War

Lawrence, Kans., Oct. 22. —(UP)— Adm. Louis Denfeld said today an enemy's longrange, highspeed submarines will pose one of the greatest threats to the United States in a future war.

(The authoritative Jane's fighting ships said in a new edition published in London that Russia is building a powerful submarine fleet. The publication said its information indicated that the Soviet Union has 250 submarines in commission and 100 more building.)

Emphasizing that this country must maintain control of the seas, naval chief of operations said "make no mistake about this—if war comes, our enemies will be the very first, will try to isolate us by slashing our vital sea arteries."

The modern submarine when surfaced can "outrun" many of the anti-submarine vessels of World War II and by use of the snorkel tube "can stay submerged almost indefinitely," he said.

Only 15 Train Wreck Victims in Hospital

Garden City, Kas., Oct. 22. —(UP)— Only 15 of the injured from the wreck of the California Limited were left in St. Catherine's Hospital here today. It was expected others would be dismissed as soon as physicians had the chance to study final X-rays.

Of the only five are known to have broken bones.

Approximately half of the 130 passengers aboard the Santa Fe train when it was derailed East of here yesterday morning suffered minor injuries. But they continued on their way after treatment at the scene of the wreck.

The Santa Fe's main line to the West Coast was opened again at 2:30 a.m. today.

Cause of the wreck was a broken rail, W. L. Moore, assistant general manager of the Santa Fe's Colorado division with headquarters in La Junta, said at the wreck scene last night.

Man Bitten by Cobra Acts to Save Own Life

Los Angeles, Oct. 22. —(UP)— A zoo operator bitten by a venomous Siamese cobra acted quickly to save his life.

The snake bit Clark Ward, 21, in the left hand while he was transferring it to a new cage.

Ward finished eating the reptile. Then he slashed the wound with a pinknife, fastened two tourniquets around his arm and set off in an automobile at high speed yesterday for Los Angeles General hospital, 40 miles away.

"I walked into the hospital under my own power," said Ward, who's been bitten before, but not by a cobra.

Ward's condition was administered and today the hospital reported Ward's condition was good.

Hawaiian Islands and Henry Ward Beecher brought the house down with his first words on women's suffrage: "Ladies and gentlemen, man is vastly superior to woman, and woman is vastly superior to man, and both of them together are them separately."

It is a place where the greatest political and intellectual problems of the last century have been freely discussed—slavery, Darwinism, feminism, the industrial revolution, women's suffrage, labor unions, the New Deal. It is a place where a day laborer can fire questions at a college professor or a Bronx housewife can pick on a distinguished author.

The other night I was there and heard Dr. Roy K. Marshall, astronomer, discuss "Science, The Endless Frontier." In most places, such a formidable subject might induce sleep. But that night, as the speaker, he was justly for scientific freedom from "political inquisition," the audience whooped, howled and whistled.

In the crowd were Chinese faces and Negro faces and Irish faces and Jewish faces. There were old men with hearing aids and men who looked like they had just come from the race track. There were red-nosed citizens of the Bowery, students, factory workers, lawyers, clerk and suit operators and artists who had wandered over from Greenwich village.

In the question and answer period, a little man in heavy glasses asked the speaker, "what lies outside the finite bounds of Einstein?" It was such a big thing to come from such a little man.

Well, you about the football team the Cooper Union used to have? They played on Sundays, in a vacant lot. They never won a game. They came close, pushing the ball down to the enemy's twenty line. But the Cooper Union backfield got excited at this historic moment. It was a question of who would take the ball over. They took so much time in the huddle they were punished and never did score or win the game.

The Loves of Carmen
By SOPHIE KERR

THE STORY: Don Jose, young officer in a fashionable Spanish regiment, falls victim to the charms of the bewitching gypsy, Carmen. He kills his commanding officer in a sword-fight over her and is forced to flee to a mountain hide-out, where he joins the band of gypsy rogues who are Carmen's associates. He becomes a thief, smuggler and murderer, and a price on his head. Victim of one of his stages, he is captured by a young dragoon. Sight of the soldier, reminder of his past, enrages him.

XXIV
A short distance from the hold-up, Carmen rode up silently on her little mule. She dismounted and stately viewed the proceedings from behind a rock, taking great care not to be seen. She watched with a pleased and curious excitement, moving, noiselessly toward the group. As she drew near, Don Jose dragged a handkerchief from his pocket and wiped his face. He did not see Carmen, she having escaped his notice, could not help seeing, seeing up to a passenger and relieving him of his watch and chain.

Don Jose looked up, and his expression changed when he saw Carmen. He walked to her side. She turned away from the passenger, her hand on the hilt of her sword.

"What are you doing here?" Don Jose said in a low voice.

Carmen's expression was frosty. "I was bored. I won't sit on any haunches and wait for you. Go stir up a pot of soup for my own woman too long, my friend."

Jose grabbed her shoulder and spun her aside from the watching passengers. "I told you to leave these matters to me. I want no more of this!"

Carmen flamed with anger. "You told me! You wanted no more! I am not your slave!" She flipped the stolen watch at his feet. "I am Carmen and nobody tells me what to do. I do as I please!"

She snatched the watch from her hand. "Picking pockets! My wife, I tell you, I am a thief!"

Truman Defies Lewis, Stumps Mine Regions

By JOSEPH NOLAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

In a forthright challenge to John L. Lewis, President Truman stumped the coal-mining regions of Pennsylvania today, appealing for the election of a Democratic administration "pledged to the protection of labor's rights."

In Scranton, the president paid tribute to John Mitchell, first secretary of the United Mine Workers, as a "great labor statesman" and pioneer in the development of collective bargaining.

Mr. Truman made no mention of Lewis who recently urged the miners to vote against him on the ground that he is "unfitted" for the White House.

While the president staged his one-day campaign swing through Pennsylvania, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was nursing a head cold in Albany, N. Y., and working on speeches for his own winter tour which starts Monday night.

In Wilkes-Barre, Mr. Truman appealed for the support of foreign-born citizens on his record on admission of European displaced persons, a "great labor statesman" and pioneer in the development of collective bargaining.

The president makes a major tour of speech tonight in Pittsburgh and tomorrow night he sets out on his final tour of the coal fields, including speeches in Chicago, Cleveland, Boston, New York, Brooklyn and Louisville.

By his main-to-man bid for the miners' votes, Mr. Truman obviously was hoping he could offset Lewis' opposition as did the late President Roosevelt in 1940. That Lewis endorsed Republican candidate Wendell Willkie, but returns from the mining precincts showed the union members overwhelmingly in favor of F.D.R.

Mr. Truman heaped scorn on the "old-fashioned labor law" in his Scranton speech. He held that it is "only the first step in the long-range strategy of the Republican party to crush organized labor."

To the Republicans with the election, he said, "the mine workers on their anti-labor campaign, 'under the hypocritical cloak of correcting abuse' in our labor laws, they will do it behind the mask of national unity. And before we know it, they will have us all unified into a depression, the way the Republicans did in 1929."

DOROTHY DIX Career of Domesticity

One of the strange things about women is that, although they all desire and expect to marry, have children and make homes, and although most of them realize this ambition, few of them think it worth while to prepare themselves for the life work they do not undertake. They don't look upon domesticity as a career in which they have to fit themselves. They wouldn't dream of taking up any other occupation without being trained for it, but they think that running a family is a sort of jackleg trade that any dumb girl can pull off without any previous knowledge or experience.

This simple fact, that we ignore so completely, goes a long way towards solving many of the problems over which scientists and social economists and moralists puzzle their heads in vain. For it is at the bottom of the restlessness and discontent of women, of family fights, of juvenile delinquency, of divorce, and of the failure of many men of ability to succeed.

Fail to Prepare
This is a sweeping indictment to bring against women for their failure to prepare themselves for marriage, but it is a just one. For that women are not lacking in brains, or industry, or any of the qualities that make for a go of any work for which they qualify themselves, is abundantly proved by the number who hold down key positions with big firms, and have achieved fortunes for themselves as lawyers, or actors, or merchants, or what not.

Women know that they must be experts elsewhere to succeed, but they feel that they can bungle the quietest of their duties as much as they like, and still get on as well as they can. So we have multitudes of women who loaf on the job. All of us know dozens of women who never learn how to cook and who feed their families on poisonous food. We know other dozens of women who keep their husbands' noses to the grindstone with their extravagance, and other dozens who are quarrelsome and complaining and who make their husbands' lives a hell.

That the failure of women to be good wives causes more divorces than all the sins of men is a matter of common knowledge. The ancient wheeze about the bride's soggy pies and burnt roasts isn't funny. It is stark tragedy. Men marry to get comfortable homes, and when the wife fails to do this, and when the bridegroom discovers that his bride doesn't know anything more about how to run a gas range than she does about how to manipulate a flying fortress, the honeymoon ends.

And no one can doubt for an instant that it is the delinquent mothers who are responsible for the delinquent children. It is being a mother, and not being a mother, that is the complaint about being a mother. A mother who never has time to talk with their children or play with them; who are never at home when their children come from school; who park their children with their neighbors while they go off to cruise themselves; who do not make their homes places of good cheer and good comradeship, who bring up the youngsters who fill the police courts and the Texas State Penitentiary.

Being a wife and mother is the most complicated job on earth. What a pity that women don't often think it is worth while preparing themselves for it!

Damage by Shooting Stars Nothing to Worry About
New York, Oct. 23.—A space ship has a 50-50 chance of being drilled by a shooting star, or meteor—about once every two years of flight time.

These calculations are made by C. G. Grimminger, of the Douglas Aircraft Co., Santa Monica, California, and released today by the Journal of Applied Physics.

For this rate of risk, Grimminger says the ship should be flying at 200 miles or more above the earth. Lower down, the atmosphere would slow the speed of shooting stars, or burn them, and reduce the dangers.

He figures that for a ship making a flight of only 20 hours in space the chances are 1,000 to one against its being hit.

These meteors are particles of stone or metal, ranging in size from less than a pin head up to 20 tons.

The latter are so scarce as to be considered no risk.

There are, Grimminger says, about six a day, weighing between about six and six and a half pounds, weighing between 100 and 200 pounds, and get through the air to the earth's surface.

These hundred-pounders also are not much risk.

He says that the only danger comes from very small particles of which many millions a day hit the upper atmosphere.

Their size is not important, but their speeds average 30 miles a second, and some go as fast as 50 to 60 miles a second.

Many of these are so small that Grimminger figures they will rate off even a thin metal skin of a "space ship."

That still leaves a certain number that will drill holes in a ship, cannot be completely calculated because the heating effects of the very high speeds are not well enough known.

Congressional Extension Services of the Reconstruction Bureau to Arkansas would be necessary to carry out the project, which is a part of the War Relocation Authority's plan to build a new city in the State.

Such legislation was introduced in the last session of Congress by Senator Fairbank (D-Ark.) and directed to the House. Fairbank, who attended the conference, said it would introduce the measure again at the next session.

Kirk told a group of engineers in his department is in conference with the local water utility. He said a ground water depletion had become a problem in many areas, with not critical in any section yet. He urged an educational campaign on the necessity for water conservation.

Probe of Rep. Thomas Indicated

Washington, Oct. 23.—(UP)—Justice department officials said today it is "a tossup" whether a federal grand jury now investigating Rep. J. Parnell Thomas, R., N. J., will act before election day.

The grand jury began an inquiry here late yesterday into charges that the chairman of the House Un-American Activities committee received "kickbacks" from employees of his congressional office.

There was no indication just when the jury would take action. Justice Department officials said the inquiry would be "comparatively long," at least a week or 10 days. One said that it is "a question" whether all the evidence can be placed before the jury by the end of next week.

"That depends, to a great extent, on the attitude of the jury," he said.

Thomas is up for re-election to a seventh consecutive term in the House on Nov. 2. Even Democratic foes concede that the 53-year-old congressman probably will win.

A veteran of almost 12 years in the House, Thomas was recently accused by a New York City columnist Drew Pearson of placing certain individuals on his congressional payroll and then pocketing all or part of their salaries. The employment involved allegedly did not work at all.

A group of lawyers, from Thomas' own congressional district, asked the Justice Department to look into the charges.

The grand jury inquiry is being conducted by a federal attorney General Alex Campbell, head of the Justice Department's anti-trust division. Campbell refused to comment on it. But it was learned that the statute involved in the Thomas inquiry is the so-called "false statements" section of the U. S. code.

Under this section, it is a criminal offense for anyone deliberately to make a false statement on an official matter to any agency of the government. Violators are liable to $10,000 fine and 10 years in prison.

In the Thomas case, the congressman is accused specifically of representing all the individuals on his payroll as bona fide congressional employees when as a matter of fact, they were not.

It was learned that the grand jury was looking into the case. Thomas told the United Press by telephone from his Allendale, N. J., home that he had "no comment at this time."
